String Processing and Information Retrieval Edgar Chavez, Stefano Lonardi, 2010-09-27 This volume contains the papers presented at the 17th International Symposium on String Processing and Information Retrieval (SPIRE 2010), held October 11-13, 2010 in Los Cabos, Mexico. The annual SPIRE conference provides researchers within fields related to string processing and/or information retrieval a possibility to present their original contributions and to meet and talk with other researchers with similar interests. The call for papers invited submissions related to string processing (dictionary algorithms; text searching; pattern matching; text and sequence compression; automata-based string processing), information retrieval (information retrieval models; indexing; ranking and filtering; querying and interface design), natural language processing (text analysis; text mining; machine learning; information extraction; language models; knowledge representation), search applications and usage (cross-lingual information access systems; multimedia information access; digital libraries; collaborative retrieval and Web-related applications; semi-structured data retrieval; evaluation), and interaction of biology and computation (DNA sequencing and applications in molecular biology; evolution and phylogenetics; recognition of genes and regulatory elements; sequence driven protein structure prediction). The papers presented at the symposium were selected from 109 submissions written by authors from 30 different countries. Each submission was reviewed by at least three reviewers, with a maximum of five reviews for particularly challenging papers. The Program Committee accepted 39 papers (corresponding to 35% acceptance rate): 26 long papers and 13 short papers. In addition to these presentations, SPIRE 2010 also featured invited talks by Gonzalo Navarro (Universidad de Chile) and Mark Najork (Microsoft Research, USA).

Full-text (substring) Indexes in External Memory Marina Barsky, Ulrike Stege, Alex Thomo, 2012 Nowadays, textual databases are among the most rapidly growing collections of data. Some of these collections contain a new type of data that differs from classical numerical or textual data. These are long sequences of symbols, not divided into well-separated small tokens (words). The most prominent among such collections are databases of biological sequences, which are experiencing today an unprecedented growth rate. Starting in 2008, the 1000 Genomes Project has been launched with the ultimate goal of collecting sequences of additional 1,500 Human genomes, 500 each of European, African, and East Asian origin. This will produce an extensive catalog of Human genetic variations. The size of just the raw sequences in this catalog would be about 5 terabytes. Querying strings without well-separated tokens poses a different set of challenges, typically addressed by building full-text indexes, which provide effective structures to index all the substrings of the given strings. Since full-text indexes occupy more space than the raw data, it is often necessary to use disk space for their construction. However, until recently, the construction of full-text indexes in secondary storage was considered impractical due to excessive I/O costs. Despite this, algorithms developed in the last decade demonstrated that efficient external construction of full-text indexes is indeed possible. This book is about large-scale construction and usage of full-text indexes. We focus mainly on suffix trees, and show efficient algorithms that can convert suffix trees to other kinds of full-text indexes and vice versa. There are four parts in this book. They are a mix of string searching theory with the reality of external memory constraints. The first part introduces general concepts of full-text indexes and shows the relationships between them. The second part presents the first series of external-memory construction algorithms that can handle the construction of full-text indexes for moderately large strings in the order of few gigabytes. The third part presents algorithms that scale for very large strings. The final part examines queries that can be facilitated by disk-resident full-text indexes. Table of Contents: Structures for Indexing Substrings / External Construction of Suffix Trees / Scaling Up: When the Input Exceeds the Main Memory / Queries for Disk-based Indexes / Conclusions and Open Problems

The Fifth String John Philip Sousa, 2004-06 He sat looking into the fire. The violin had brought back memories of the past and its dead. He mumbled, as if to the fire, she loved me; she loved my violin. I was a devil; my violin was a devil, " and the shadows on the wall swayed like accusing spirits. He buried his face in his hands and cried piteously, I was so young; too young to know." He spoke as if he would conciliate the ghastly shades that moved restlessly up and down, when suddenly -- Sanders, don't be a fool '

The Pl/I Programming Language (Classic Reprint) Paul Abrahams, 2017-11-30 Excerpt from The Pl/I Programming Language Fortran's rigid rules for program formatting. The notion of block structure was taken from Algol 60, while pl/i structures were taken from the record descriptions of Cobol. However, a great many features were added to pl/i that have no counter part in its ancestor languages. An example of a pl/i program is given in Figure 1. A program is written as a sequence of external procedures, which are defined in such a way that they can be compiled separately and then linked together when the program is executed. Within an external procedure, there can be internal procedures. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
